

Eaten Up By Lies

One day I told a little white lie
About who I am inside,
But that small lie had jagged teeth
And it took a bite of thigh

To explain away the oozing ill
I told a tiny fib,
But that darn fib grew a sharp drill
And it burrowed in my rib

I faked a smile and carried on
With lightning in my side,
But that fake smile turned to a yawn
As my jaw began to slide

So I just hid behind the door
'til everyone departed,
But my skin stuck to the wall and tore
It was me that was outsmarted

When I got home it wouldn't stop
This was the great deceit,
And I unto the floor did drop
Because it had eaten both my feet

I guess what they say is really true,
That lies will eat you up
They grow their teeth and start to chew
And do I deserve it?

Yup.
